

Growing up, a family friend, like many Americans before her, kept her beer cold in a beer koozie. Although disguised to look like a soda can, a common printerly snafu undermined the camouflage: PIPSI. Ever practical and not one to waste anything, she used her koozie for years. This line is dedicated to her; to mimicry, likeness and the boundaries of possession. Every-day is Halloween.